

You may have a tube called an I.V. in a vein in your arm. It helps you get better so you can go home. There will be three circles or squares on your chest with strings connecting them to a box that shows a picture of how your heart is working. They may be removed before you leave the recovery room. You may feel the skin pull slightly as they are removed like when you take off a band-aid.

